

Christopher D. Pierson, Counsel

"In a legal dispute, people are often confused about their options. I've handled hundreds of cases over the course of my career and am familiar with everything from settlement negotiations to depositions to mediation to jury trials. My long experience with both plaintiffs and defendants means I can anticipate outcomes and strategize effectively from both sides of a situation. I take pride in guiding people toward resolutions they can feel good about."

Areas of Practice:

Litigation, Personal Injury

Chris is an experienced trial attorney who has successfully tried numerous cases to verdict in courts across Massachusetts. He has prevailed in cases where his commercial or individual clients overcame long odds. Chris works with his clients to develop a litigation strategy with an outcome in mind. He represents parties in all areas of civil litigation including commercial disputes, personal injury, and individual matters. Previously he practiced law as in-house counsel at an insurance company, and represented individuals and businesses in lawsuits involving personal injury, property, and contractual matters. During law school he worked in the transactional group of a large law firm, on regulatory matters for a bank, and on litigation for an energy firm and an insurance company. Prior to law school, Chris worked for an investment bank and an investment management firm.
